Burlington, July 8.—The contract to erect the new United States Weather Bureau station has been let to T. B. Robinson, who will begin work soon. The building will be located on Main street, nearly opposite the experiment farm buildings and will cost $2,500. The dimensions are 45 by 37 feet from the ground. The walls will be of brick. The first story will contain the living rooms of the occupant, together with reception and exhibition rooms, etc. On the second floor will be six sleeping rooms and extending from the roof will be located the observatory and flag pole.

W. R. B. Wilcox is the supervising architect of the building and the plans were drawn by Harding & Upham of Washington.

CHAMPION CASH-BURNER

To Show New York How to Spend Money

WALTER SCOTT HIS NAME

"Croesus of Death Valley," California.
Bound for Gotham to "Show Them How to Go Some" —Ex-Bronco Buster.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—In a few days an odor of burning money will be stretching from this city clear across the continent to New York. He who will cause the conflagration is Walter Scott, variously known as "Scotty," the "Croesus of Death Valley," and the "Hornet of the Funeral Mountains."

The white light district of New York is warned to get ready for Scott. When he strikes Broadway it is his intention to make all other currency burners look like the sickly yellow of a freckle. He hopes in his journey to New York to establish a new record for transcontinental time. From this city to Chicago he will travel over the Santa Fe Railroad in a special which will cost him $5,000. If the train makes the run in forty-eight hours Scott will pay a bonus of $500.

In addition he offered to pay the railroad $20 for every minute clipped off the forty-eight hours if the company would agree to pay him $20 for every minute the train exceeded forty-eight hours, but as the offer was in the nature of a wager, the railroad could not see its way clear to accept it.

"Scotty," chief object in going to New York is "to fill the Knickerbocker Trust Company so full of money that the vault will bulge."

"I intend to land in New York and go to this blooming old bank and then I'll keep shoving rolls of money into the teller's wicket until I play them to a standstill. I'll show them what going some with money is."

Scotty is wont to hide himself away in the desolate Funeral mountains to nurse his mysterious mine.

Six years ago this mysterious young man, hard of muscle and tanned to a leather finish, was one of Colonel Cody's men, and the best "bronco buster" in the entire "Wild West" outfit. He used to ride the peevish and fractious bucking fiends known as broncos for 300 a month, and take risks with his life for 200 a day. While the show was on at Madison Square Garden Scotty failed to appear, and when he did come around to where Colonel Cody was fretting about him he had no adequate explanation ready.

Scott is said to be the only man whose repertory was of such tobacco sort as to silence "Buffalo Bill," and when he left it was regarded as quite certain he had ended his career as a bronco rider.

Now Walter Scott is the richest man who calls in at Los Angeles to judge from the way he spends money. Where he gets it no one knows. It came from back in the hills or out in Death Valley or from some place to which he has never been trailed. He is said to have killed eight men who tried to follow him from Los Angeles to his camp far off to the east, but this he has always stoutly denied.

In California the legend runs that he has discovered the famous "Pegleg Mine," one of the lost mines of the West, and known to have been the most fabulously rich piece of land in the world. There is nothing improbable in the theory that it has been located by Scott.

"Scotty," as he is known in Los Angeles, has eliminated coins and small bills from his calculations. He buys and thinks in hundreds, five hundred and thousand dollar bills. He purchases champagne enough in the course of a day to flood a swimming tank and drinks his own share of it. He carries dollar cigars around in his pockets in sheaves, and it is estimated in Los Angeles that he has never given away less than $100 a day in tips. The bellboys who wait on him when he is in Los Angeles usually buy race horses when he leaves and take to the track.

It is one of his customs when buying cigars to toss a hundred-dollar bill on the counter in payment. When told that the bill cannot be changed he

ORRINE CURES WHISKEY AND BEER HABIT.

Orrine removes the craving for whiskey, beer or other alcoholic stimulants. The patient soon loses all desire for drink; his nervous system, which was formerly a wreck, is soon restored to its normal condition, and the craving for liquor is gone without the slightest knowledge of the patient. Orrine No. 1 can be given secretly, without the patient's knowledge. No. 2 is in pill form, for those who desire to be freed from the dreadful curse. Either form, $1 per box, or six boxes for $5, mailed (sealed) by the Orrine Company, Inc., Washington, D. C., who guarantee to cure the craving for liquor or refund the money. Write for a complete treatise on "Drunkennes," mailed free in plain, sealed envelope.

tears it in half and tosses one fragment to the cigar salesman.

"That's an easy way to change a bill," he says as he walks away.

Scott will be a revelation to Broadway in the way of clothes. He absolutely refuses to waste any of his money in tailor shops. He has worn the same old nether blue flannel shirt and high-crowned Stetson, pinched to a Texas peak, ever since he began his visits to Los Angeles from the back country, and will buy no others. He couldn't be made to wear suspenders under a gun, and regards a white shirt as frivolous.

Scott's only tendency toward the emulation of the ways of the very rich is his fondness for high speed automobiles. "Glass wagons," he calls them, and he is going to buy one as soon as he can find one that will go fast enough for him. He usually spends a part of each day dashing around the country in a motor car when he makes his trips to town, and his chauffeur always has to be possessed of an utter disregard for life and a desire to make the machine fly like a bird.

AN EASY ONE.

Marlboro Farmer Relieved of Part of His Wad.

Newfane, July 8.—Raymond Ranney, who says he is from West Canaan, N. H., is in the county jail to await hearing next Tuesday on the charge of stealing $30 from Elias Prouty, a Marlboro farmer.

Ranney says that he and a man named Frank Morrill started from West Canaan last week with a horse and buggy owned by Ranney's uncle, and that they swapped horses several times and slept in the woods during their trip to Vermont. They came to Windham county early in the week. July 4 they called at Prouty's to buy a buggy and offered in payment a bill so large that it would be necessary for Mr. Prouty to change it, thereby showing how much money he had with him. Mr. Prouty took out a roll of bills containing $150 and proceeded to count out a part of it. The men offered to assist in the process and got as close to the roll as possible. After their departure Mr. Prouty found that $30 of his money also had departed.

The men drove toward Guildford, so word was sent to Deputy Sheriff Wellman to look for them. Mr. Wellman had the several roads in town watched, and it fell to the lot of L. E. Jaquith to discover the two men. He notified them that they should have to detain them and they appeared to be satisfied with the proposition. They turned their horse around, Mr. Jaquith's orders being for them to drive in front of him, and no sooner had they done so than Morrill jumped out and disappeared in the woods. Ranney whipped up his horse and got away, but Mr. Jaquith telephoned to a neighbor, who cut short Ranney's flight. It is probable that Morrill has found his way into New Hampshire, but State's Attorney H. D. Ryder thought it would be better to hold Ranney a few days pending a search for Morrill, consequently he was taken to Newfane jail for safe keeping.

LABOR CASE TEST.

Final Adjudication to Be Sought in U. S. Supreme Court.

Boston, Mass., July 8.—The Essex county labor case involving the right of a union to procure the discharge of an employee on the ground of non-membership in the union is to go to the supreme court of the United States for final decision. This is the case where Michael F. Berry sued Jerry E. Donovan for damages by reason of having been discharged from the employment of the Hazen B. Goodrich company, of Haverhill.

The company had agreed with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union not to employ any but union men, and Berry was a non-union man and was discharged through the efforts of Donovan, a member of the union, in accordance with the contract with the Goodrich company. Berry recovered in the lower court. The case was appealed to the Massachusetts supreme court on exceptions and now on appeal is taken to the United States court. The papers have been filed in Salem.

The Greatest of Them All.

The most imposing wonder of amusement growth today is the circus. The greatest development of the idea is due to Ringling Brothers. Today it takes eighty-five cars to transport their enormous enterprise. The tents alone cover ten acres of ground space, and the largest canvas will comfortably seat 14,000 people. In the menagerie tent are sheltered forty elephants and 108 cages, dens and lairs. A baby elephant, American born, is the priceless pet of this department. Six hundred and seventy-five horses are carried, and the men, women and children employed aggregate 1,280. To move this stupendous institution each day without delay or confusion indicates a most wonderful system. Military chiefs at home and from other countries have studied and lauded the wonderful discipline that pervades the Ringling Brothers' shows and pronounce it the best governed amusement institution in the world. Montpelier, Monday, July 17.
